MATH GAMES AT HOME OVER THE WINTER BREAK:

Here are some math games you can play at home over the winter break.

Tens Concentration

No. of players: 2-4

Materials: Deck of cards with 6 of each number from Ace through 9

How to play:

1. Place 16 cards in the middle of the table, face down in a 4X4 arrangement.
2. Players take turns turning over 2 cards trying to turn over a pair that totals 10.
3. If a pair can be made, the player keeps those cards and continues to try and turn over another pair. If the player is not successful, they return the cards they turned over to their original position, face down and they replace any cards that they took to make a pair with new ones from the deck.
4. The person who collects the greatest number of pairs is the winner.

Variations:

For younger children, use only small numbers that add up to 5 (e.g., all the cards from Ace to 4).

For older children, the pairs could be multiplied and points given as follows: if the answer is under 20, they get one point; if the answer is 20-40 they get two points; if it is over 40 they get three points.

Making Fifteen

No. of players: 2-4

Materials: Deck of cards, counters

How to play:

1. The object of the game is to get as close to a total of 15 as possible without going over.
2. One player deals two cards face down to each player.
3. The player to the left of the dealer goes first. If their cards add up to less than 15, they can ask the dealer for another card, trying to get their cards to total a number as close to 15 as possible without going over.
4. If the player goes over 15, they are out for that round.
5. Each player takes a turn asking for more cards.
6. After each player has had a turn, everyone turns over their cards and compares totals. The player with the total closest to 15 wins that round and takes a counter from the pile in the centre of the table.
7. If there is a tie, no one gets a counter.
8. The game ends when one player has collected 10 counters.

Variations: Instead of 15, use other totals such as 21, 30, 50, and deal out three cards to begin.

War

No. of players: 2-4

Materials: Deck of cards

How to play:

1. All the cards are dealt so that each player has one stack placed face down.
2. Without looking, each player turns up the top card in their pile.
3. The player whose total is the highest takes all cards played.
4. If the sums are equal, players keep their own cards.
5. The player who has the most cards in the end is the winner.

Double War to Ten

No. of players: 2-4

Materials: Deck of cards

How to play:

6. All the cards are dealt so that each player has two stacks placed face down.
7. Without looking, each player turns up the top two cards in their pile.
8. The player whose total is the highest takes all cards played.
9. If the sums are equal, players keep their own cards.
10. All players must agree on the totals before anyone takes the cards for that round.
11. The player who has the most cards in the end is the winner.
